Planners gut sign ordinance

The Bethel Planning Board caved in again last week, further undermining the prospect that ten years from now Bethel will still look like the Bethel we know -- and not yet another characterless, sprawl-mauled suburb of Boston.

In voting to approve yet another waiver extension for the outsized Pleasant River Motel sign, the planners also reneged on their obligation to the people of Bethel.

It was the people of Bethel, after all, who decided to adopt a sign ordinance. And it is the duty of the Planning Board members to administer that ordinance -- not to see how many ways they can find around it, nor to water it down to suit their own personal tastes or political points of view.

Administering such regulations will, on occasion, involve difficult decisions. Sadly, this board does not seem up to difficult decisions -- as its trail of waivers and compromises clearly shows.

One rationale for the sign ordinance, aside from the obvious aesthetic concerns, is that it forces all businesses in town to play by the same rules. As far as signage is concerned, that means they must lure customers by the art and attractiveness of their presentation -- not by raw size, number or height.

We sympathize with the Dumonts. Their sign was clearly a major investment, and its muted colors make for a far more tasteful presentation than some signs in town that do conform to the ordinance.

But either the playing field is level or it's not. By granting a competitive advantage to one business (especially a business owned by a Planning Board member) the board effectively guts an ordinance the voters of this town said they wanted.

Look down the road a bit. Can you see this board saying to some future motel builder that his sign has to be smaller than the Dumonts'? Think that would stand up in court if the developer decided to push the point? In reality, of course, the mere threat of legal action would be more than enough to elicit yet another compromise, and yet another oversized sign.

The Maine Supreme Court has ruled in numerous cases that variances and waivers are to be granted sparingly -- that they are to be the exception rather than the rule. But this board has now packed enough of a grab bag of exceptions that new applicants can simply go in, pull out whatever precedents they need, and proceed to argue that their own signs should also be allowed to be bigger, more numerous, and higher than the ordinance allows.

Another committee is currently reviewing the sign ordinance and proposing to suggest some fine tuning. This is a completely appropriate move, now that the town has had four years to live with the ordinance and see where it works and where it doesn't. But at the same time, it is a shame that the board is unwilling or unable to apply it.

Not everyone on the board took the easy way out last week. Dennis Doyon, Reggie Brown and chairman Frank Vogt bit the bullet and voted against the extension.

Doyon went one step further. He resigned.

This was not the act of a sore loser, it was a commendable act of principle.

For seven years Doyon's was a voice of fairness and common sense on the board. He mastered the details, but he also sees the bigger picture, and he realizes that this board is squandering its authority and failing in its duty to the people -- and the future -- of Bethel.

His resignation is the town's loss.

...and it has been difficult for the town and local businesses to keep up with the work that other municipalities do.

We haven't been able to find anyone else willing to plow on a 24-hour basis, and do it the way it ought to be done," he said.

Steve Wright said Dennis Wilson, who now handles the summer road maintenance, would likely have his contract expanded.

A motion to put the job out to bid was defeated.

Voters approved $4,000 for the Med Care ambulance service, but asked selectmen to re-examine the town's options for the future.

"Sunday River Skiway has PACE. It might be good to have a unified plan for the geographic area," resident David Schlusser said.

Bill Wright said the town went with Med Care eight years ago because Bethel Rescue was not interested in providing the service.

Several people suggested approaching Bethel again to serve residents.

"It may be time to look at our system again," said Jim Bennett, a member of the Bethel Unit.

Steve Wright opened selectmen should research the issue.

An article for $55,000 for solid waste disposal, up from last year's $45,000, was approved.

Solid Waste Committee Chairman Sig Sysko reported that in 1994 more than 758 tons of waste had been disposed of, with 54 tons recycled.

"We're saving more money than we're spending on recycling," he said.

Sysko encouraged townspeople to consider composting, and offered to set up another workshop on it through the Oxford County Extension Service.

Voters also approved $30,000 to be expended from unappropriated surplus to reduce 1995 taxes.

The town budget figure totaled $154,447.

Voters pick Wendy Hanscom as Newry's first woman selectman

The election of Wendy Davis Hanscom as Newry selectman broke one tradition, but preserved another.

"She's the first woman selectman elected in Newry's 190-year history," First Selectman Steve Wright said after Monday night's Town Meeting.

But she is not the first Davis elected to the position -- Hanscom's grandfather, Robert T. Davis, served in 1935-36, while her great-grandfather, Sumner P. Davis, was a selectman in 1921-23 and 1927.

Although Hanscom said she had been thinking of running for the seat for some time, the final decision was last-minute, when she found out Jim Sysko would not run.

"I didn't want to challenge someone, but since the position was open, I decided to do it. I've been looking for a community service project," she said.

She said her goal for the coming year would be to learn as much as she could about Newry government.

"I know a little bit about selectmen's boards, after watching them for five years as a reporter for the Bethel Citizen," she said.

While breaking new ground as Newry's first woman selectman, Hanscom is opting to stick with the term "selectman", rather than "selectwoman" or "selectperson".

"I'll go with tradition on that," she said.

Andover

"We have room in the budget because the firemen don't get paid. In most towns they do. I don't see many people out there at 2 a.m. (at a fire) saying, 'I'll run in there'. I make $9 an hour, and I have to walk off the job when there's a fire," he said.

Nevertheless, townspeople voted to fund the article at the Budget Committee's figure.

Another article, which requested $5,000 to buy 5-inch fire hose and adapters to replace the 2 1/2-inch now in use, was also the subject of debate.

Assistant Fire Chief Bob Hutchins argued the hose could be put away more quickly after a fire, enabling firemen to return to their jobs sooner. He also said the 2 1/2-inch hose now in use is deteriorating.

MacKnight maintained that money allocated for 1995 could be used to buy more of the smaller hose. The article was narrowly defeated.

Other items which were approved at the Budget Committee's figures included: maintaining town buildings ($14,000); supporting the library ($13,000); funding the planning board ($750); and provide for recycling ($7,500).

Voters also supported a recommendation of no raises for town employees.

Several social service agencies which Andover had supported in the past received no funding this year. They included Androscoggin Home Health, the Child Health Center, Tri-County Mental Health and Family Health, WCBB television, Oxford County Child Abuse, and the American Red Cross.

Selectmen were asked to consider removing some of the town's street lights to save money, after an article in the amount of $11,000 was approved for lighting.

A request to buy a computer with a CD-ROM encyclopedia to replace the library's seven-year-old encyclopedias was put off until next year. Library trustees had said that updating a computer program would be more cost-effective in the long run than buying encyclopedias in book form.

Voters decided not to use $12,780 designated for recreational land purchases to reduce taxes. Recreation committee member Brian Mills argued in favor of preserving the fund to possibly buy land for a skating rink or ballfield.

Town manager study approved

Voters also approved setting up a committee to study the feasibility of hiring a town manager. The issue will be considered at next year's Town Meeting. Former selectman Wayne Delano strongly supported the study.

"It takes 30 or 40 hours a week to do the selectmen's job. We should do it because we want to help the community, not because it's a full-time job," he said.

Outgoing selectman Kathy Williamson agreed.

"What we have is certainly not working," she said.

At the end of the meeting it was discovered that two items had been omitted from the warrant -- one for approximately $35,000 for the landfill closing, and another for funding for the Council on Alcoholism. A special town meeting will be held later to consider them.

The town auditor's report was not available at the meeting, and Delano suggested selectmen consider getting a new auditor. Town Clerk Phyllis Spaulding said Gary Dyke of Mexico currently provides the service.

In elections, which took place later in the day, two seats on the Board of Selectmen were each decided by four-vote margins.

Joseph Madigan won a three-year term over Gary Vaughn 50-46, and Robert Greeke won over Mark Burlamachi, 41-37, to finish out the final year in a seat vacated by Kathy Williamson. Greg Peaslee got 27 votes as a write-in candidate.

Running unopposed, Kelli Scotti was elected to the SAD44 School Board, and Shirley Gannon was elected to finish a two-year term as treasurer.

THIS WEEK AT THE
Moses Mason House

Stories of bedbug bites and the challenge of getting wood to market in several feet of snow were among the many insights gained during the oral history night held at the Bethel Historical Society's Dr. Moses Mason House Meeting Room on Thursday evening.

Panelists for the evening who discussed their logging days were Richard Carter, Allan Fraser, Avery and Ernest Angevine, Willard Wight, Rodney Howe and Tom Wheeler. Discussing their memories of the woods, some extending back more than 60 years, panelists described what tough work it was, but also some of the good times as well. A capacity crowd attended; several asked questions of the panel and some shared their memories as well.

During the business portion of the meeting, society secretary Shireen Vincent presided in the absence of the president and vice-president. She announced that the next meeting would be held on April 6 and feature a presentation on society founder Eva Bean to celebrate the centenary of her birth in 1895. The "Gift of the Month" was announced as a book, "The Chadbourne Family in America: A Genealogy," a gift from life member Ted Chadbourne in memory of his parents Phil and Mary Chadbourne. Mrs. Vincent thanked everyone who made the 1995 Heritage Day a success. A new addition to the museum store "Visiting Our Past" was announced.

Persis Post announced that all the refreshments for the evening contained molasses, a substance always found in logging camps.

Stoneham rejects land sale to WMNF

STONEHAM--At the annual Town Meeting voters rejected the sale of 150 acres of land to the White Mountain National Forest. The property sale was turned down because nearly 75 percent of land in the town is already not taxable since it is owned mostly by the W.M.N.F. "We'll run out of land," said Fire Chief Albert Fox. Receiving overwhelming approval was the plan for a 24-by-50-foot addition to the municipal/fire station building. The estimated cost would be $40,000-$50,000, roughly equal to that of the entire building when constructed in 1979. Voters also elected Wayne Santos to the SAD72 board of directors, while Peter Fox won a fifth term as selectman, running unopposed. Residents here will see little change in their 1995 taxes, with the property tax rate likely remaining at $12.4 per $1,000 valuation.

Bus companies don't want rail service

PORTLAND--A New Hampshire bus company has mounted the first organized opposition to the planned restoration of passenger train service between Portland and Boston. C & J Trailways of Dover, N.H., has hired a lobbyist to fight the proposal, claiming it represents unfair competition to regional bus lines and could saddle the state with huge subsidy costs. "There are all these false assumptions in the (funding) formulas. It shouldn't be rushed through without all the participants looking at the numbers," said lobbyist Abby Holman. Officials involved in the project questioned the timing of the company's protest, saying it should have come much earlier in the process. Maine has been trying since 1989 to reinstitute passenger train service. Federal funds have been appropriated to begin Amtrak service from Portland. The plan's last major hurdle is to get Maine officials to agree to assume liabilities for economic dislocation caused by the rail service.

...and time may be running out

WASHINGTON--Congressional budget cutting could threaten planned Amtrak service in Maine. Over $700 million that was allocated for various purposes in 1993, but hasn't been spent yet, may be cut -- $12.6 million set aside for Boston to Maine train service included. Maine officials say the state needs to spend the money as soon as possible, although the proposed cuts are still in the early stages of consideration. Efforts are underway to form a state transportation authority, which would be responsible for completing seven agreements that have to be signed before federal money is spent to restore passenger service. State Transportation Commissioner John Melrose said he hopes all the agreements can be signed and completed this year. Wayne Davis of the rail advocacy group Trainriders Northeast, said the state should go ahead and sign all the agreements instead of waiting for a transportation authority to do it.

Timber thefts on the rise

AUGUSTA--Timber trespass, the illegal taking of trees, appears to be on the increase in Maine, with individual trees of some species now valued in hundreds of dollars. "Forest rangers investigated more than 500 complaints from angry landowners last year and just this past month, we've received nearly fifty complaints," said Thomas Doak, acting director of the Department of Conservation's Maine Forest Service. Elderly and nonresident woodlot owners are often the targets of timber theft because it is harder for them to keep an eye on their property. Timber thieves can be very convincing, even intimidating, and may ultimately get verbal permission to cut the woodlot. The payment may be minimal, and some landowners receive nothing for their trees. Landowners should protect themselves by insisting on a written contract for all harvests, considering hiring a state-licensed forester to help plan the harvest, and keeping property lines well marked. Individual trees of some species now valued in hundreds of dollars.

Maine's labor force declines

AUGUSTA--The number of Maine residents in the civilian labor force declined for the second year in a row. Following a drop of 18,000 between 1992 and 1993, the number of labor force participants fell by 17,000 between 1993 and 1994. These declines are in stark contrast to the average annual increase of 11,700 from 1980 through 1992. Structural changes in the labor market may have been responsible. Defense-related jobs have been lost, and jobs requiring new and different skills have been emerging. The mismatch between the jobs available and the type of jobs many Maine residents were seeking, in addition to slow employment growth, likely had a negative impact on the labor force.

Four-wheel-drive not invincible

DETROIT--People who think they're less likely to have a wintertime accident because they drive a four-wheel-drive vehicle should think again. Although the vehicles provide added traction, when it comes to stopping they have no advantage over two-wheel-drive. The main problem with four-wheel-drive vehicles is the people driving them. "These people have it in their heads that they're driving Sherman tanks," says James Crowe, a traffic-accident investigator with the Denver police. "As soon as snow hits the ground, they go speeding up the highway, and then two minutes later they're rolled over or skidding like crazy." A Boston driver who bounced off the side of a truck after trying to stop on a snowy road said, "When you're in a four-wheel drive, there is this sense of power and overconfidence that makes you forget everything else. You really don't realize your limitations until you hit something," he said. Safety officials say there aren't any firm figures linking drivers of four-wheel-drive vehicles to a disproportionate number of accidents. But there are now 15.6 million of them on the road, and some models have worse than average injury and collision insurance claims.

IRS on the prowl

WASHINGTON--The IRS has already delayed 1.5 million refunds this year and millions more will be snagged by the agency's anti-fraud crackdown before the April 17 filing deadline, congressional investigators said last week. Returns with social security number discrepancies and claims on the earned-income tax credit for the working poor are the targets for investigation. Delays may range up to eight weeks, but IRS Commissioner Margaret Milner Richardson said her agency must aggressively attack fraud estimated at up to $5 billion a year. After years of complaints that it was not doing enough to stop fraudulent refunds, the IRS this year began using a new computer screening technique to flag suspicious returns claiming the earned-income credit. It also began checking the social security numbers of spouses and dependents, not just the main filers, in an effort to catch phony claims for exemptions. As many as 7 million of the 86 million expected refunds may be delayed.

Phone home through Internet

DALLAS--A tiny Israeli company has developed software that allows Internet users to call anywhere in the world for the monthly cost (usually $20-30) of Internet access. Consumers can buy the software for $49, and use a multi-media computer's microphone and modem to make calls to other computer users with the same software. However, the Internet, with 20 to 30 million users, is an unlikely source of competition for the long-distance phone companies, because they provide many of the high-speed phone lines that make up the Internet. AT&T, Sprint, and MCI have many contracts leasing the lines to major companies, universities, and government agencies.

'Ayuh,' nope

DIXFIELD--Dixfield may not be saying "Ayuh" to its departing guests much longer. The word was painted on the back of welcoming signs in the town in December, but 54 people signed a petition saying they think it sends the wrong message. Clarice Hodges, who circulated the petition, said, "We feel it's not a positive thing. We don't feel it will increase tourism, and some people feel it's ignorant, it's stupid, it's dumb, but all in all there's a lot of feeling it should be removed." She told selectmen at a meeting last week. Norine White, a member of the Economic Development Committee which had the signs painted, said, "It was not done to make anyone look down on us; it was done strictly to have a sense of humor about who and where we are, and people should have a sense of humor about their lives, and hope that the tourists would have a sense of humor." She said the committee hoped people would stop to take pictures of the signs, and maybe spend money in town, too. Hodges was not convinced, saying it didn't make sense to get people to stop as they were leaving town. The selectmen will discuss the issue further at a later meeting.

From the Bethel Police log:

Officer hits jackpot of losers

On Mar. 5 at 12:30 a.m. a police officer found a large number of instant lottery tickets on the Route 2 overpass in Bethel. The tickets, of the "Wizard of Odds" and "Big Spin" variety, had been scratched and were losers. Surrounding stores were checked for possible thefts of tickets and were found to be secure.

Saturday, March 4

At 2:27 a.m. Sunday River Security reported a vehicle off the road at the bottom of Blake Hill. Upon arrival an officer learned from the driver that he had missed the stop sign at the bottom of Chandler Hill and had become stuck in a snowbank. The odor of alcohol was detected on the driver's breath and he was given a field sobriety test, which he passed with difficulty. He was then given a breath (balloon) test, results pending. The vehicle, which was not damaged, was towed from the scene. The driver was transported to his residence.

At 2:30 a.m. police went to a home on the Crocker Pond Road to summons the resident for furnishing alcohol to a minor. A large party at the residence, with juveniles present, had been reported. When police arrived the residence was dark, and there was no response from anyone inside. Police planned to investigate further at a later date.

At 11:50 a.m. an unknown caller reported a car accident on Railroad Street. The driver had left his car to take pictures of the train, and when he turned around he realized the car was rolling down the street. The man had left the vehicle in drive. He attempted to get in it while it was in motion, but was unable to open the door. The errant car's journey ended in a nearby snowbank. No damage was reported.

At 9:19 p.m. in the Sunday River Brewing Co. parking lot, two witnesses observed a man strike a driver's side car window with a long black object, shattering it. The subject told the driver, "You don't know me," then got in his car and left. The attack happened without warning. Police checked local bars and hotels and were unable to locate the suspect. Damage to the car was estimated at $200.

At 11:10 p.m. a Broad St. resident reported a male and female engaged in a heated argument outside his home. Upon arrival, police found there had been no assaults. The pair was advised that further complaints would result in police action. They were then transported home.

Friday, March 3

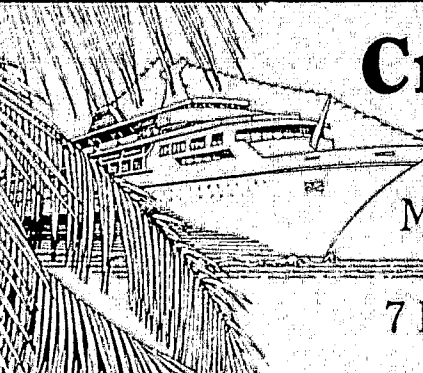

At 1:36 a.m. a Skillings Rd. resident reported that two girls had knocked on her door requesting to use her phone. Entry being denied, the two continued towards Bethel on foot. The caller was concerned for the girls, as neither was properly dressed for the cold. Police transported them home. Both subjects had been drinking.

At 2:55 p.m. a man visiting from Portland reported two males, one having a handgun, on Spring St. The subjects were not found during a check of the town by police. Officers were advised to be on the lookout.

At 8:25 p.m. A Main St. business requested additional patrol after a former employee made threats against the owner and the business. The man had been recently fired. The employer did not want to press charges but warned police that the subject could be dangerous when intoxicated.

This report highlights points of interest from the Bethel Police Department log, but does not include all reports of police activity.

The hill just north of the Greenwood/Bethel town line will also be cut down by about one and a half feet to improve sight distance, Hendrickson said.

The construction will cost $1.28 million, with 80 percent federal and 20 percent state funding.

A related road project, which would widen Route 26 from the area of the Woodstock-Greenwood town line through Locke Mills village, has been delayed until 1997, Hendrickson said.

He said the work there would involve widening a bridge, so federal and state environmental permits would be required.

The road would again be widened to 12 feet, but the shoulders would be narrower in the village -- four feet instead of eight.

Hendrickson said the widening would not result in a change of speed limit through the village.

The state expects to purchase, and probably tear down, a house owned by Peter Rovero and Patricia Coburn opposite the end of Howe Hill Road.

Hendrickson said the house would have to go so that section of road could be widened without having to take out a gas pump service lane at Bob's Country Store.

"We'll probably have to tear it down, unless someone wants to pay to have it moved," he said.

He said he expects the present owners to keep property behind the house to build another home.

The prospect of losing a 150-year-old house to progress does not sit well with Greenwood historian Blaine Mills.

"I hate to see an old house torn down to accommodate the state's needs. We have so few old houses left. I hate to see them widen the highway so people can speed more," he said.

Mills said the house was built in the 1840's by Alvah Hobbs.

go with the neighborhood," she said.

Francis Dumont, a Planning Board member, had stepped down for the discussion. He told the board that if he were forced to take the sign down, he would probably have to replace it with internally lighted signs -- perhaps as many as six (two each for the motel, campground and condo association).

"Where I'm located, if I have to bring that sign down, that's my only option," Dumont said.

He also noted he had already taken down a number of signs on the property. "We took down five other huge billboard signs that were hanging all over Route 2, saying campground this and that."

But Vogt, Doyon and Brown all argued that the sign was just too big.

Doyon pointed to the much smaller signs at the Norseman and River-view motels, and he worried about the effect of granting such a large waiver (Doyon has resigned from the board as a result of the vote -- see sidebar).

"If we grant you a waiver at 192 square feet," he told the couple, "we might as well take the sign ordinance, toss it out the window and say 'have at it folks.'"

Feeney argued for the extension, pointing out that the board had set a precedent in granting other waivers. "There are plenty of waivers out," he said.

But Brown countered, "The sign is six times bigger than anything else. I don't believe we've issued any variances for anything six times as big."

Feeney also argued that forcing the Dumonts to take down the sign would constitute a "taking." "They have an existing piece of property that the ordinance will take away from them. That's a violation of the Constitution as far as I'm concerned," he said.

Doyon questioned the contention that removing the sign would create a financial hardship. He pointed out that Francis Dumont had come in last year to the board with a proposal to replace the sign.

"You have come before us with other sign plans, so there must have been money or a way to finance it," he said.

Dumont acknowledged as much. He had initially intended to replace the sign, he said, but he and his wife had argued about it, and eventually he came to see things her way.

He came to realize, he said, "that I'm giving something away that she really wants."

Barbara Dumont concurred. "I am the one who handles the money situation, and I just felt that it was an extremely large cost to burden ourselves when we have a sign that is perfectly convenient for our business."

Jack Cross agreed. "I know it's a big sign, but they put the money into it and put it up."

Doyon resigns

By MICHAEL DANIELS

Planning Board member Dennis Doyon has resigned in response to last week's vote to approve another waiver extension for the Pleasant River Motel sign.

Doyon, who has served on the board since 1988, had two and a half years remaining in his current term. He had expressed an interest last year in leaving the board, but had ultimately stayed on in order to deal with the Bethel Station project.

Doyon's letter of resignation was submitted to the Board of Selectmen at their regular meeting Monday. It reads in part as follows: "The fact is that for five years the Pleasant River Motel has known they must conform to a waiver granted at the time their site plan was approved, adding a restaurant to the motel. The waiver and subsequent waiver were issued in good faith, and at termination a new sign, in accordance with Bethel's current sign ordinance, would be erected. Failure to do so, and the board's actions to extend the waiver for another five years, basically questions the need for our ordinance."

"I have always tried to administer my duties as equitably as possible, taking into account reasonable allowances, but I now question the fairness of the board to all future applicants."

State AG files for tire dump injunction

By ALISON ALOISIO

The state Attorney General's office has filed for a preliminary injunction to stop the flow of tires into Peter and Susan Gordon's tire facility on the Rabbit Road. If granted, the injunction would also force immediate action to reduce the fire hazard at the site.

Assistant Attorney General Jon Edwards filed the motion for the injunction last week in Oxford County Superior Court. It is expected to be heard by a justice sometime in April.

The next step could be a permanent injunction and fines for violating state law.

The possibility of a fire at the site, where an estimated 1.7 million tires are now stored, has worried town officials for years.

According to state officials, the facility has violated its 1991 Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) license by maintaining seven tire storage cells, instead of the three originally approved.

Other violations include exceeding the allowable height of the tire piles, not providing sufficient fire buffers and fire lanes around and between them, allowing more than two storage trailers at a time on the site, and not setting up an escrow account for site cleanup or closure.

The injunction would immediately stop further tire deliveries to the site, require the construction of soil strips around and between the cells within 10 days of the order, and require the establishment within 30 days of a $15,000 escrow account for cleanup or closure.

A three-count complaint also filed by the AG's office outlines the violations of state environmental laws and solid waste regulations, and concludes that the tire facility constitutes a public nuisance.

It asks that the Court impose multiple fines of between $100 and $25,000 for each day of each violation of the laws and regulations, order Gordon to remove the unlicensed storage cells, pay damages for creating a public nuisance, and pay the cost of the litigation.

No quick solution

Edwards said of the preliminary injunction: "Our main goal is to stop the tires from coming in, so we aren't creating a bigger problem than we have now."

He said if the injunction is granted and Gordon didn't comply with it a contempt action would likely be filed.

As far as action on the complaint itself, Edwards said it would not be a quick process. He said if the Court did ultimately find against Gordon, more deadlines for compliance might result.

"But it would be the Court doing it this time," he said, in contrast to deadlines imposed by DEP in the past.

Asked if he expected the state might ultimately take control of the site and seek disposal methods, Edwards said, "This is a step-by-step procedure. I hope it doesn't end up there, but regrettably, it could."

The state took over a larger tire dump in Durham some time ago, but Edwards said state officials have not come up with economically viable ways of getting rid of those tires.

Greenwood selectmen chair Marie Bartlett said she is "very encouraged" that the delivery of tires to the site will stop now that the state is taking action. She said the town has been kept abreast of the state's plans for the past three weeks.

"After six years, I'm glad they're finally taking firm, positive action," she said.

As to the possibility of the state taking over the site, Bartlett said, "Better the state than the town. We can't afford it. But I think the best possibility for finding homes for those tires is through the Gordons and the state together."

Gordon has tried unsuccessfully to find profitable ways to dispose of the tires. In past months he and his wife, Susan, have met with state and town officials to seek a solution.

Still seeking markets

Susan Gordon said Monday they have been talking to people in the logging and landscaping business who might be interested in investing in a tire-chipping operation.

"They want to see what the markets might be first," she said.

Gordon said she has tried unsuccessfully to contact Boise Cascade officials about selling chipped tires for use in their boilers. The company has been burning chips since last June.

She also said two trailer loads of tires have recently been sold to a Brazilian company.

Gordon complained that the state has been sending mixed messages on regulations.

She said she and her husband had been told in 1991 that there was no limit on the height of tire piles, but since then limits had been imposed.

"It's difficult to keep up, with the state changing their minds on what should be done," she said. "We've been trying to do what they ask."

Regarding the requirements of a possible injunction, Gordon said they are working on widening the fire lanes between some tire cells.

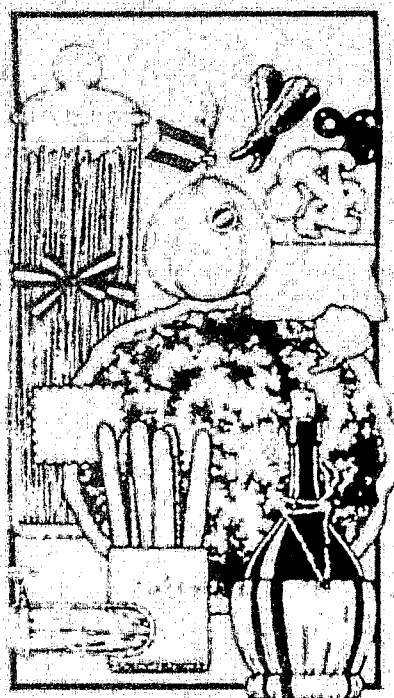

She declined to comment on whether they will stop tire deliveries to the site, saying she needed to seek legal advice.

Strategy #10 - Choose the best method for deducting car expenses

If you use a vehicle in your business, you can take a tax deduction for the business portion of your vehicle expenses. Choose from two methods: the standard mileage or the actual cost method.

For the standard mileage method, you simply multiply total business miles driven by the IRS's standard rate for the year (29¢ a mile for 1994).

For the actual cost method, you must keep track of your actual expenses (i.e., gas, oil, repairs, tires, insurance, parking fees, tolls, and taxes). You also must keep track of business mileage and total mileage if your vehicle is used only partially for business.

If you want to be sure you're maximizing your business car deductions, contact -

Several East Andover residents were visited by a bobcat. The rare sightings were made at the Hayden residence, then at George Ladd's and George Crocker's. The animal seemed weak. Warden Rick Mills was called and picked up the animal to take to the vet's. Unfortunately the bobcat died enroute to Augusta.

Betty Moore had a lot of visitors over school vacation. Her daughter Shirley, husband Robert and girls Kristina and Lindsey. Also daughter-in-law Debbie and friend

I have something a little different this week -- Luvie Sweetser was 96 years old on March 6.

Two of her great-granddaughters wrote something for her that they wanted in the paper. I am printing them just as they wrote them. Hope you had a happy birthday, Luvie.

"(L)ived in Greenwood when she was a kid.

"(R)ich, because she will always be loved! Love, her great-granddaughter Amanda, Westbrook, ME, 12 years old."

"My great-grandmother (Luvie Sweetser) will be 96 years old on March 3. She was born in 1888 in Greenwood, ME. She is the oldest citizen of Woodstock. I wish that she didn't have a stroke, so she could tell my sister (Amanda) and I what happened in the old days. She always smiles even when she was sick or depressed. She likes people to write to her and she wants all the people that knew her to send a birthday card this year, or visit the Ledgeview Nursing Home. Her great-granddaughter, Bethany Stafford, Westbrook, ME, eight years old."

The Windy Valleys Sno-Mobile Club welcomed about 60 or more hungry snowmobilers, some from Sebago Branch Duckers, some from Greenstock Snow Sports Inc., some from Andover Snow Valley, some from the Slippery Sliders, and a few wanderers, from who knows where, so that they could taste Owen Wight's famous oyster stew at the annual supper on Saturday night, Feb. 25, at the Grange Hall. For those who didn't care for oysters, there was plenty of other foods, like homemade beans, casseroles, salads, and a full table of pies, cakes, and other goodies, and of course coffee.

"Footnote"... The Windy Valleys Sno-Mobile Club is sponsoring a snowmobile safety class on March 19 at 8:30 a.m. at the Town Building. Perry Edwards will be instructing. Four members of the "Newry Bowling Gang" were at the Oxford Lanes, Rumford, one day last week: Karlene Bachelder, Betsy Clark, Gil Seeley, and Jane Young. Karlene Betsy had one spare, Gil had one spare and one strike, and Jane had one spare. I should mention that her birthstone is an amethyst, and I told her to rub it for luck, and she did! I'm going to bring mine next time and rub it and see what happens....

GAZEBO RENOVATION—Andover's gazebo will be receiving a facelift, thanks to voter approval last Saturday of $2,360 from the state Property Tax Relief Fund. The money was added to an account started last year for improvements to the gazebo and a water fountain, both located on the town common. (Photo by Alison Aloisio)

County G.O.P. hosts Lincoln Day dinner

Senator President Jeffrey H. Butland (R-Cumberland), the first Republican Senate President since 1982, was the featured speaker at the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the Oxford County Republican Committee held recently at Goldstreet Restaurant.

In his remarks, Senator Butland praised the good work of Oxford County State Senators Dana Hanley (R-South Paris) and Norman K. Ferguson Jr. (R-Hanover) and described the challenge ahead to bring common sense and fiscal responsibility to state government.

He also observed that the largely Republican delegation from Oxford County is the strongest one in the state and lauded the county for its success in electing Republicans.

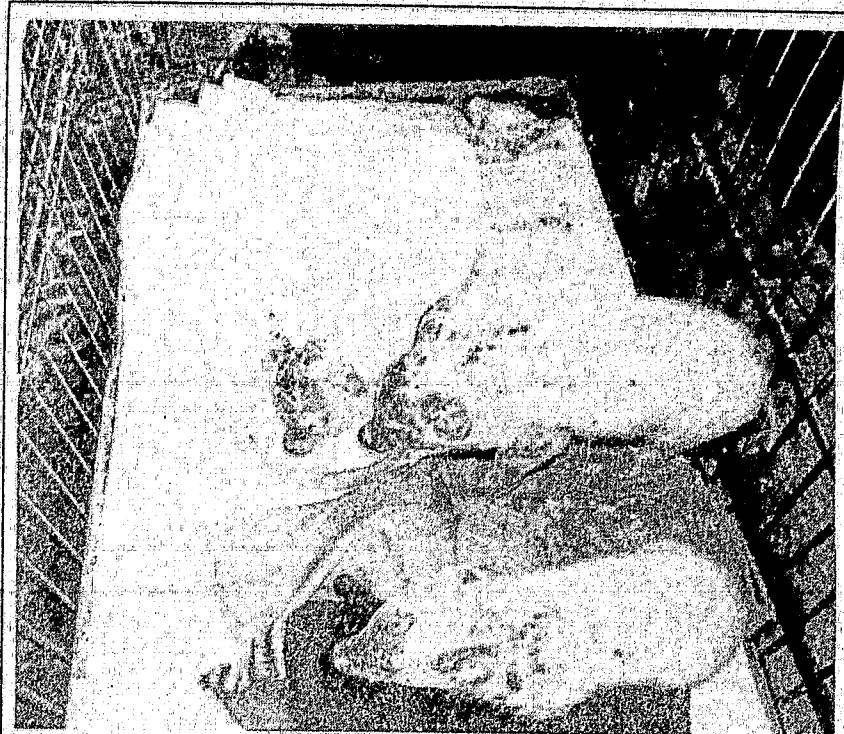

County Chair Stan Howe of Bethel welcomed the nearly 100 attending from all parts of the county. He thanked all those who had worked to make the dinner such a success, particularly co-ordinators State Committeeman Carl Hansen and his wife Nancy. State Committeewoman Becky Kendall was also praised for her handling of ticket duty and Barbara D. Brown for soliciting auction items.

After a delicious roast beef or chicken dinner, those assembled were entertained by the "Pine-tones," a quartet assembled from the Mollycoddle Chapter of "The Sweet Adelines." State Representative Alvin Barth (R-Bethel) served as auctioneer and raised several hundred dollars for the County Committee.

Chairman Howe introduced all the legislators attending: State Sen. Hanley, Sen. Ferguson, Rep. Barth, Rep. Brenda Birney (R-Paris), Rep. Tom Winsor (R-Norway), Rep. Rob Cameron (R-Rumford), Rep. Charles Heino (R-Boothbay), and Rep. Wendy Ault (R-Wayne). Also present were Republican County Commissioners Jim Carey and Steve Merrill, Sheriff Skip Herrick, and Register of Probate Ted Tracy. Greetings were also brought to the dinner by Cliff Garvey, representing Sen. William S. Cohen and Jane Desaulniers for Sen. Olympia J. Snowe.

The evening ended with the singing of "God Bless America."

LUCKY SURVIVORS—These three piglets survived, but 25 other pigs died when an early morning fire Saturday destroyed Scott and Wendy Annis's East Bethel Road barn. The building was totally engulfed when firefighters from Bethel, Greenwood and Woodstock arrived. "All we could do was put water on it," said Bethel Fire Chief Jim Young. The Annis's home, located near the barn, was undamaged. The fire is believed to have been started by an overheated electrical wire. The three surviving piglets were found under the burning barn and rescued by Axel Annis, 16, and his friend Freeman Corriveau. Wendy Annis is feeding the survivors and medicating their burns. She reports they are hungry and active. Three cows also escaped the blaze. (Photo by Michael Daniels)

10TH MOUNTAIN DIVISION AWARD—Howard "Skip" E. Spencer (right) recently presented the 10th Mountain Division's Spirit of the Mountain Award to Albert Jackman (left in group) and Rick Hodinott, at Mt. Abram. Jackman first skied Mt. Abram in 1970, while visiting his brother in Acton, Mass. for Christmas. 1970 was the year the first chairlift (the Way Back Machine) was installed. Jackman was an executive officer of the 604th Field Artillery Battalion and special liaison to Washington. Spencer was a member of the 86th Infantry Division, Company D. He and his wife, Carol, live in Ellsworth. Carol learned to ski at Mt. Abram. (Photo by Michael Daniels)

Members enjoyed the video shown by Joan Kimball, president, on "ice cutting in the early days." Refreshments were furnished by Mary Mills. The next meeting will be Wednesday, April 5, with Louise Seames furnishing refreshments. The regular dances will be held on March 11 and 25. Blaine Mills will supply the entertainment at the April meeting. It will be a history and slide show of the late Nettie Maxim and her photography.

Joy of Skiing celebrated

The eighth annual Joy of Skiing was held at Sunday River Cross Country Ski Center on Saturday, Feb. 25. A progressive picnic on skis, the event showcased family fun while raising money for the Maine Chapter of the American Lung Association. One-hundred twenty-five skiers ages 2 to 83 skied and ate their way from the fresh trail-fried donuts prepared by Jonathan Smith of Bethel and his crew, on to muffins, fruit and brownies provided by Hometown Bakery and served by Bethel's Marna McGinniss. The next stop was Artists' Covered Bridge over the Sunday River for lentil soup, prepared by Debby Luxton of West Bethel and served by Bob Lee of Andover and Jack Nordahl of East Bethel. The skiers then traveled on to the Firepit for s'mores — toasted marshmallows, chocolate and graham cracker concoctions — under the direction of Dorothy Hinshaw of Sumner. The final stop was at the Sunday River Ski Center for coffee, tea, cheese and crackers and ski revelry that included ski demonstrations and a sking trombone serenade by Adam Pearsall of Colby College. Melinda Remington of Bethel, who coordinated the event, said that $500 was raised for the Lung Association.

State boating laws change May 1

New state boating regulations that take effect this year will make the traditional boat cushion unsuitable as a personal flotation device on any Maine watercraft. Only wearable life jackets will be legal.

The Maine Department of Inland Fisheries and Wildlife is advising all boaters of these changes in state boating regulations, which take effect May 1. The law will state that "effective May 1, 1995 Class A motorboats (16' or less in length) and all canoes, kayaks, sailboards and rowing sculls, regardless of length, shall carry either a Type I, II or III (wearable) Personal Flotation Device for each person aboard. Type IV throwable devices (including boat cushions) will no longer be considered a suitable PFD. An exemption is being allowed for manually propelled watercraft which are leased or rented as part of a livery or rental business, until May 1, 1996."

The requirements for watercraft 16 feet and longer remain unchanged.

The changes in state boating regulations are in accordance with federal requirements and U.S. Coast Guard regulations.

In addition to the wearable flotation device requirement, youngsters 12 years of age or under may be required to wear their life preservers at all times.

BECOME A HOMEOWNER

Community Concepts' Homeownership Program is seeking participants interested in becoming homeowners by building their own home.

Program staff assist applicants with the application process. Once approved for the self-help building program, the families form an association where they promise "sweat equity" on all the homes to be built in their association. The families work closely together and, with supervisory assistance from staff at Community Concepts, complete all the homes of the families in their association.

Community Concepts also has a program in place called HOPE III for those who wish to purchase an already existing home. Information on both programs will be discussed at the dates shown. Participants can select the program best suited to their needs.

For more information on becoming a homeowner through either program, plan to attend one of the following meetings: Tuesday, Feb. 7 or March 7, 1 to 6 p.m. at the Market Square office in South Paris; or Thursday, Feb. 9 or March 9, 1 to 6 p.m. at 2 Court Street, Auburn.

In the past two and one-half years 13 families have built their homes and are now proud homeowners. The dream of owning a home will come true for six families in the Rumford/Mexico area where construction on six homes is well underway. It is expected that the families will move into their new homes in late spring.

Community Concepts, Inc., is a private, nonprofit community action agency incorporated in 1965 with an all-volunteer board of directors. The agency's mission is "to coordinate, collaborate, and to focus resources to help people in need build opportunities for a better tomorrow."

Telemark

In making a telemark turn, the skier extends his outside ski forward and bends his inside knee -- lifting the heel off that ski.

The turn is awkward to learn, but once mastered, "It's an incredibly graceful and powerful turn," said Biff Higginson, telemark program director at Mt. Abram.

"It's also very stable, especially in powder or crud, or in the backcountry," Higginson said.

And with their heels free, and using skins on the bottom of their skis, telemark skiers can easily climb hills without the benefit of ski lifts.

"Earning your turns" it's called, and it opens up the off-piste beauty of the backcountry.

Bruce Pierce of Bethel is one recent convert. He moved here three years ago to work at Sunday River Cross Country Center and spend his free time alpine skiing. However, his boss, Steve Wight, owner of the cross country center, was a telemark skier and that peaked Pierce's interest and converted him to telemarking.

"I was looking for an alternative to alpine skiing. Telemarking is more of a physical and mental challenge for me," said Pierce. "Not only do I feel I get a better physical workout, I feel I have more creativity of style and form."

Rick Boucher, owner of the telemark ski shop Mahosuc Mountain Sports in Bethel, said Pierce is fairly typical of the customers he has seen. Many of Boucher's customers are former alpine skiers who became bored and were looking for a challenge and something to offer a sense of adventure.

"When alpine skiers first come in the shop, they usually have the idea that telemark equipment is highly specialized," said Boucher. "Actually it is very versatile. Any alpine technique can be done on telemark equipment plus a lot more. Telemark equipment can take one backcountry skiing, winter camping, ski mountaineering, and, of course, to lift-service areas. Alpine skiers come to realize that it is the alpine equipment that is highly specialized."

Other local telemark skiers agree. Litty Parker, a former telemark instructor and now owner of The Wild Rose in Bethel, was an alpine skier when she took up telemarking over 10 years ago. She taught telemarking at Sunday River during the late 1980s and the biggest change she has seen is the quality of the equipment.

"You can do anything on today's telemark equipment. In fact, I parallel turn on my telemark skis as often as I do telemark turns," said Parker.

Sunday River is not the only place where telemarkers are turning out in big numbers. Mt. Abram in Locke Mills began a telemark ski club three seasons ago. It offers telemark instruction and equipment, weekend clinics and video critiques, as well as lift ticket discounts for club members.

On the heels of the World Cup and National Championship races, Mt. Abram is offering a fun citizen telemark race on March 12. This is an uphill/downhill race with prizes not only for the fastest times but also for the slowest time, the oldest racer, and other fun categories.

Both ski areas plan to continue to attract telemark skiers. According to Derby, Sunday River will host the World Cup race again next year and has hopes some year of holding the World Championship there.
